Elm Tree Farm

A 35-acre site in Stapleton, East Bristol, Elm Tree Farm provides vocational training through a range of horticultural activities and animal husbandry.

This includes growing a wide range of produce for sale locally.

The farm has a variety of livestock, including hens, ducks, geese, goats, horses, pigs, and cows, all of which require essential daily care like feeding, watering and cleaning.

People with all sorts of different needs, abilities and aspirations are able to attend the farm because of the quality support provided.

Some people work independently, others with support or in small groups, learning about growing flowers and vegetables, in gardens and glasshouses, as well as learning to use tools and machinery.

We also sell our produce at the local farmers' market, giving people the opportunity to learn retail skills.

At the farm we:

- Equip people with transferable work skills and help them gain paid employment.
- Help people feel part of the team by developing their responsibilities for the animals, gardens, and customer service.
- Promote a sense of achievement and pride in the work of the farm.
- Recognise and respect people as individuals with diverse interests, cultures and ambitions.
- Provide an environment that promotes confidence and self-esteem.
- Encourage people to play an active part in the local community.
- Build strong partnerships with local employers and educational organisations.
